DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-8 allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

With respect to claims 1 and 5 the instant invention is directed to an access network where channels of a distributive interactive service are broadcasted, where user terminals sends a request to a broadcasting unit close to the subscribers to indicate the requested channels, and if the requested channels is not available at the input of the broadcasting unit, the broadcasting unit generates second request indicative for the unavailable requested channel to a more central broadcasting unit for the requested channel. The relevant prior art of record such as Watson, Jr. et al (6,266,816) teach a cable television control apparatus which includes channel access controller which receives, at the input, all available television channels, filters out channels and provides services to as many as four subscriber households. Tak-Shing P Yum (IEEE TRANSACTIONS ON COMMUNICATIONS, VOL. 39, No. 8, August 1, 1991) teaches a network system with local switches to handle customer requests where the local switches receives a customer request, and if is current transmitting that program, it just sends a copy to that customer, on the other hand if the customer is the first one in that region to request that program, the local switch sends a signal to the central switch to ask for a copy and passes it on to the customer. Rao (5,940,728) teaches a network architecture which distributes digital information to subscriber units where near-video-on-demand (NVOD) server, provides program to various Video

Pedestal (VPs), which receives a request for video program from subscribers and if the requested video program is unavailable, the VP sends a request to the NVOD server for the requested video program. However, neither Watson Jr., Yum nor Rao and any of the cited references teach or suggest, alone or in combination, the feature where a broadcast unit “generates a second type request information indicative for the unavailable requested channel, when the at least one requested channel is not available at the input of the broadcasting unit, and a request transmitting means coupled to the request generating means for transmitting the second type request information to another broadcasting unit,” as recited in the instant invention with respect to independent claim 1; and further neither Watson Jr., Yum nor Rao and any of the cited references teach or suggest, alone or in combination, the feature of “a second broadcasting unit processes the first type of request by broadcasting channels in the limited selection of channels and sending a second type requests to a first broadcasting unit for channels not within the limited selection of channels,” as recited in the instant invention with respect to independent claim 5.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”

Conclusion

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Rao et al (6,594,826) disclose video pedestal network.

Bahl et al (6,385,454) disclose apparatus and method for management of resources in cellular networks.

Gupta et al (6,272,151) disclose scalable multimedia network.
